Description: Hi Everyone- I need a solid, reputable company to help remediate a leak in our attic. Last year a company installed insulation in our attic to better our energy costs, but during that installation, stepped on a drip line, broke it, and then covered it up with insulation. Needless to say there's a lot of problems we need to fix. I need recommendations for a mold, inspector, good remediation/remodeling company, or just a well-known, detail oriented, remodeler. Probably the worst time to have any of this happen given the rising cost of lumber, materials, and energy. I work hard to keep this house clean and safe and this company completely mutilated one side of my house. After a couple of days of feeling overwhelmed and anxiousness , I'm working to get the work done asap so we aren't stuck breathing in mold etc. if anyone has any solid recommendations or has gone through this experience and has advice, I would greatly appreciate it. Thanks.

Lead Type: general_contractor, handyman

Description: Hi Neighbors, We are looking for recommendations for contractors you have used personally to remediate water damage, repair studs and drywall. We had a slowly leaking drain pipe from our kitchen sink which left us with damage to the wall. Can you recommend any contractors? Is there one company that can handle the remediation and the rebuild or do I need to hire multiple people. It is just a small area behind the kitchen sink. (Please, contractors, do not reply offering your own services.) Thanks.

Name: Ryann Stansberry

Lead Type: general_contractor, garage

Description: I am looking for a general contractor who’d be willing to help with a water heater closet rebuild in my garage, coordinating with the plumber who will be installing a new water heater. There is some water and mold damage, though not enough to require remediation, so you’d need to feel comfortable working with that. I’d ideally like for the work to be completed this week. Please reach out if you are available!
